

GROWTH METHODIST MIDLOTHIAN EXPANDS CARDIAC CARE

Methodist Midlothian completed a $5 million expansion project in August to add a cardiac catheterization lab that features new equipment, interventional lab resources, and the most advanced technology to help patients with heart disease.

“A cardiac cath lab is a specialized area in a hospital where specialists diagnose and treat coronary artery disease and heart attacks using tiny, flexible tubes called catheters to access the heart and its blood vessels,” says Roberto Wayhs, MD, cardiologist on the medical staff at Methodist Midlothian.

The catheterization procedure helps physicians and nurses assess key measures of heart function, including blood pressure and blood flow, and it allows them to take scans of arteries to pinpoint life-threatening blockages. Because the most effective treatment is performed within 90 minutes of the onset of cardiac symptoms, having fast and convenient access to a cath lab can be lifesaving, Dr. Wayhs adds.

“The cath lab will greatly enhance our ability to diagnose and treat a wide range of cardiac conditions, from the simplest to the most complex,” says Jary Ganske, president of Methodist Midlothian. “This expansion helps meet the ever-growing need of care in Ellis County and provides additional resources for our hospital team and cardiologists on the medical staff.”

COMMUNITY MEMBERS GET AN UP-CLOSE LOOK AT ROBOTIC SURGICAL SYSTEM

Methodist Midlothian showcased its new da Vinci Surgical System to participants of the Leadership Midlothian program, which promotes community engagement among residents and business professionals. This program, offered by the Midlothian Chamber of Commerce, provides networking opportunities and a greater understanding of the community’s various sectors, including healthcare.

Participants got an up-close look at the city’s only hospital and learned about the advanced technology available to them.
